Claims 10-45 are allowed for the reasons that the prior art does not disclose A changer for driving a first module or a second module, the changer comprising: a roller having at least a latching element for latching with either the first module or the second module, wherein the roller further includes a first spiral groove on a side surface of the roller and the first spiral groove spirals around the central axis of the roller such that depth of the first spiral groove increases gradually, and the roller also includes a second spiral groove on another side surface of the roller and the second spiral groove spirals around the central axis of the roller such that depth of the second spiral groove increases gradually; a first lever rod for dipping into the first spiral groove and pressing against the bottom surface of the first spiral groove; and a second lever rod for dipping into the second spiral groove and pressing against the bottom surface of the second
